VSTECs BERHAD (Technical Buy)

- VSTECs Berhad (VSTECs) closed at RM4.18 (+0.48%), holding above the key short- and medium-term SMAs, indicating that both its near-term and broader uptrend structures remain intact despite the pullback from its recent high of RM4.53. Notably, the 50-day SMA (RM4.04) continues to act as crucial support, with share price consistently rebounding around this level.
- Technically, the daily stochastic oscillator is stabilising within the 40-50 band, leaving room for further upside, while the RSI currently at 55.68 is curling higher, signalling gradually improving momentum. Meanwhile, the increasing red bars on the SmartMCDX point to growing institutional participation, reinforcing the positive outlook.
- Key immediate resistance is seen at its intraday high of RM4.21, followed by the recent high of RM4.53. On the downside, key support lies at RM4.09 (13-day SMA), with stronger cushioning near RM4.04 (50-day SMA) and RM3.92 (38.2% Fibonacci retracement), providing buffer against further declines
- We suggest entering the stock at RM4.18 with a take-profit target of RM4.52, offering an estimated upside of roughly 8.1%, and a stop-loss at RM3.91 to cap downside risk at about 6.5%.
