PRS Provider's Commentary (as at 29 February 2024)

Asia Pacific equities rebounded in the month of February. China A-shares rose in February on the encouraging Chinese New Year travel and spending data, the 25bp cut to the 5-year loan prime rate which was the steepest on record since a reform of rates in 2019, the national team's buying of key A-share index-linked ETFs and appointment of a new reform-minded CSRC chairman. Hong Kong equities also followed suit, driven by announcement of full elimination of stamp duties on residential property and better than expected CNY consumption. South Korea's KOSPI rose amid heightened investor sentiment surrounding the Korean government's corporate value-up program, with value names (stocks trading below 1x PBR) being at the center of the rally in selective sectors such as financials, utilities and auto triggering significant value rotation play throughout the month. Taiwan's TWSE index was up amid ongoing global AI optimism which helped to drive further upside in IT. The manufacturing PMI rose to 48.8 in January from 47.1 in December and Taiwan's January IP beat expectations, rising 16% YoY. India equities rose as well amid the high visibility of growth in multiple years ahead.

ASEAN markets, however, were mixed. The Straits Times index fell as the January manufacturing production came down 5.7% MoM and marks a reversal of the strong 4Q23 upturn. However, outside of tech, the levels of production have been broadly moving sideways and suggests limited spillover into non-tech sectors. The Thai Composite Stock Market index also declined as the 4Q23 growth and trade balance in January came in below expectations. 4Q23 GDP rose 1.7% YoY vs. market expectations of 2.5% YoY, bringing overall 2023 growth to 1.9%, down from 2.5% in 2022. Jakarta Composite Index rebounded in February as the exit polls indicated that the Prabowo-Gibran partnership has likely won the Presidential election in just one round with a landslide margin, which gave comfort to investors on the continuity in policies. 4Q23 GDP growth came in at 5.0% YoY, in line with market expectation. The Philippines Composite Index was one of the outperformers in the region in February as inflation moderates further and the central bank maintained its policy rate in its latest meeting. The Vietnam stock index continued to outperform in YTD February 2024 driven by improving economic activities and a strong 4Q23 results season. Retail sales and consumer services revenue increased by 8.5% YoY in February. 4Q23 earnings grew 5% QoQ and 33% YoY thanks to the robust earnings of banks and technology companies. Domestically, the FBM Emas Shariah Index rose by 2.22% MoM in February with the gains led by technology and consumer sectors.

A peaking of the US Fed rate hike cycle typically bodes well for the Asia Pacific equity markets. However, moving into 2024, corporate earnings will still be affected by the elevated interest rate level as they roll over debts that were financed at lower rates previously. Equity valuation though, remains reasonable with the region's price/earnings ratio below the long term average. Among the key investment themes in focus in the region will be global supply chain relocation, energy transition, further tourism recovery as well as rate-sensitive sectors. China's weak property sector and low consumer confidence will likely continue to weigh on growth but the central government has room for more policy stimulus and we believe it will maintain its growth-supportive stance.
