EQUITY MARKET REVIEW

In March, Japan's equity market declined sharply as risk-off sentiment intensified following the attacks on Iran by the U.S. and Israel.

The Japanese stock market fell early in the month as geopolitical tensions in the Middle East escalated and crude oil prices rose sharply, raising concerns about slower economic growth and pressure on corporate earnings. Although the market rebounded temporarily when oil prices paused following remarks by U.S. President Donald Trump, investor sentiment remained cautious as concerns over a prolonged conflict were not eliminated.

In the middle part of the month, both the Federal Reserve and the Bank of Japan kept policy rates unchanged. However, expectations for near-term U.S. rate cuts receded, while concern over a possible BOJ rate hike in April increased as higher energy prices raised inflation concerns. Toward the end of the month, Japanese equities remained soft amid lingering uncertainty over the Middle East situation and renewed concern over the potential economic impact of sustained high oil prices.

By sector, stocks linked to higher energy prices such as mining and marine transportation were relatively strong, while economically sensitive sectors and those more negatively exposed to higher oil prices were weak. Large-cap value stocks also outperformed growth stocks overall during the month.

MAJOR CHANGE IN ALLOCATION OF TARGET FUND

There are new stocks added and new stocks sold in March 2026:

Stocks Added

- NEC Corporation (6701, Information Technology) - A major IT services company. Domestic IT demand remains firm, particularly from central government agencies, and we also expect growth from its aerospace and defense-related businesses.
- Nippon Signal Company, Limited (6741, Information Technology) - The company provides railway signaling systems, intelligent transport systems, station equipment, and platform doors. In addition to benefiting from increased investment by domestic railway companies in safety and labor-saving measures, the company is also expected to expand in overseas markets such as India.
- Nichiha Corporation (7943, Industrials) - Nichiha is the leading manufacturer of ceramic exterior wall materials in Japan. We expect profitability to improve as a result of restructuring progress and the withdrawal from some U.S. operations.

Stocks Sold

- Softcreate Holdings Corp. (3371, Information Technology) - The company provides e-commerce site-building engines for retailers with both physical and online sales channels. While the business environment remains favorable, we sold the position as part of broader portfolio rebalancing and in consideration of overall sector positioning.
- Digital Information Technologies Corp. (3916, Information Technology) - The company is engaged in software development. While the operating environment remains solid, we exited the position in the context of broader portfolio rebalancing.
- MCJ Co., Ltd. (6670, Information Technology) - MCJ is a designer, manufacturer, and seller of PCs for niche users. Its share price rose following the announcement of an MBO-related tender offer, and we used the strength to exit the position.

OUTLOOK AND STRATEGY OF TARGET FUND

We expect the Japanese equity market to remain volatile and somewhat directionless in the near term.

If tensions in the Middle East escalate further and high energy prices persist, this would likely remain a headwind for equities by increasing concern over inflation, margins, and economic growth. On the other hand, if progress toward a ceasefire improves visibility and reduces concern over the energy outlook, sentiment could recover meaningfully.

Domestically, we believe downside risks to the economy may be cushioned by policy support. In addition, the continued execution of growth strategies by the Takaichi administration and ongoing progress in corporate governance reform should remain medium-term supports for Japanese equities.
